

RATE PARITY + DISTRIBUTION HIERARCHY

RATE PLAN LINKING REVIEW

KEY FINDING

Most promotional and third-party rate plans are currently linked under BAR, even when they should be linked under their respective product base plans.

CURRENT STATE

- BAR is functioning as the effective parent for:
 - Advance Purchase plans
 - Non-Refundable plans
 - Length-of-Stay plans

TARGET STATE

- BAR → Best Flexible Rate plans
- ADV → Advance Purchase plans
- DISDIR → Pre-Pay / Non-Refundable plans
- DISLOS → Stay Longer / LOS plans

COMPARISON

PRODUCT TYPE	CURRENT PARENT	CORRECT PARENT
Advance Purchase	BAR	ADV
Non-Refundable	BAR	DISDIR
Stay Longer	BAR	DISLOS

THE ISSUE

An assessment of the hotel’s third-party configuration indicates that the current setup is not optimized for ensuring all channels have equal pricing to drive booking performance and ensure rate parity across the hotel’s consumer channel.

In the Central Reservation System (CRS), retail pricing is controlled by a primary base rate—the Best Available Rate (BAR). The distribution of standard pricing relies on linking dedicated rate plans to this base:

- Full Rate Distribution: The third-party plan is linked to the BAR at 0% off.
- Net Rate Distribution: The third-party plan is linked at a contracted discount (e.g., X%) off the BAR.

None

Full Rate Distribution	BAR > OTA	Price Setup: 0% off BAR
Net Rate Distribution	BAR > OTA	Price Setup: -21% off BAR
(Discount is Equal to the Margin)

For promotional strategies like Advance Purchase (AP), Synxis utilizes a Double Deviation framework. This multi-layered logic establishes a tiered hierarchy:

- The AP plan is first linked to the BAR at a set discount.

THE OTA RATE IS THEN ANCHORED TO THE AP PLAN TO INHERIT THE APPROPRIATE REDUCTION.

None

Full Rate Distribution
BAR > AP	Price Setup: -10% off BAR
AP > OTA	Price Setup: 0% off BAR

Net Rate Distribution

BAR > AP	Price Setup: -10% off BAR
AP > OTA	Price Setup: -21% off BAR
(Discount is Equal to the Margin)

FINDINGS AND COMMERCIAL IMPACT

While the Double Deviation logic is intended to ensure consistent reductions across channels, the audit identified a significant number of incorrect configurations. Many OTA Advance Purchase plans do not link directly to the primary AP rate plan.

RISK ASSESSMENT

- Diminished Channel Visibility:
Fragmented pricing logic may trigger channel partner algorithm penalties, causing reduced booking volume and suppressed visibility on primary consumer sites.
- Rate Parity Risk:
Incorrect rate plan linking prevents downstream pricing updates, creating systemic rate discrepancies between the hotel's direct channels and third-party partners.
- Operational Inefficiency:
An inconsistent hierarchy complicates revenue management tasks, impairs auditability, and undermines the reliability of channel-specific reporting.

RECOMMENDATIONS

REVREBEL recommends a thorough review and correction of the distribution hierarchy. All third-party promotional plans must be re-anchored to their respective primary rate plans to ensure a repeatable and accurate pricing flow.

Also clean up should be conducted on the rate plans names. Choose a single naming convention in the rate plan hierarchy. The hotel currently mixes Retail or Standard which can be confusing to the front desk agents. Pick one and be consistent in its application.

We recommend the following:

NAMING IDENTIFIER	DESCRIPTION
Retail	Best Available Equivalent
AP	Advance Purchase
Promo	Promotional
Geo	Fenced International or Domestic Rate Plans
Member	Fenced Member Deals
EC, TC	Expedia Collect, Trip Collect
HC	Hotel Collect

FOLLOW UP AND NEXT STEPS

This last part of this section includes details for the rate plans identified as being incorrectly linked to their parent rate plans. Although configuring discounts directly on certain extranets and maybe applying the discount on some of the rate plans before explaining the observed CRS setup, it does not align with the hotel's current practice of managing percentage-off discounts via the RMS. Directly linking within the extranet causes pricing fluctuations to be ignored, creating further parity issues.

Furthermore, we recommend mapping the hotel's rate categories to mirror each product's base rate. This approach ensures that these rates inherit the same linked, rate-based pricing structure while consistently applying identical restrictions at the rate category level as a standard moving forward.

We have also included guidance on configuring international and GEO-fenced rates. By utilizing Synxis's built-in functionality, these rates will only display when GEO-fence criteria are met, helping align international rates with parity goals or enabling localized discounts—strategies the hotel is not currently leveraging.

Additionally, a proven workaround is provided to establish a dedicated, controllable rate plan for the Expedia Member rate.

Finally, a review of channel activations reveals that Hotel Tonight was returned on October 14, 2025. As the team has opted not to utilize this platform, we suggest coordinating with the account manager to remove it from the activation queue. Furthermore, Trip.com is currently flagged as "Active-Update in Process," which appears to be a minor administrative oversight following the hotel's go-live date.

SYNIXIS CRS LINKED RATES

The recommended structure in the Synxis CRS for establishing rate plans involves utilizing a double deviation model linked to a single parent rate, offered at a discount from the Best Available Rate (BAR).

This approach connects the pricing between the hotel's direct rate and each partner, ensuring parity across all distribution channels.

MEMBER, PACKAGE & GEO BASE RATES

We highly recommend establishing a similar base rate strategy for other products—such as International Offers, Package Rate Plans, and Member Rates—and then linking the corresponding OTA versions to them. This will allow the RMS to yield rates, such as the package rate, with greater precision based on targeted forecast need periods, or to lower the discount during high-demand dates.

MIS-ALIGNMENT EXAMPLES

The pricing review for December 9 highlights the mis-alignment resulting from improper parent rate plan linking. While all Hotel Trader rates should be structured with a 20% discount to account for the required margin, the partner's Member Rate, Member LOS Rate, Package Rate, and Member Package rate are currently linked to BAR rather than their equivalent hotel-direct products.

This configuration directly stalls commercial momentum and negates the hotel's strategy to backfill group segment losses through wholesale channels. Even though Hotel Trader provides extensive distribution reach, the Package rate—which is the critical rate plan for capturing this audience—is rendered ineffective due to being incorrectly priced to BAR.

Although the following illustration highlights Hotel Trader, identical logic applies to additional channels suffering from absent or flawed linkage. Restoring the distribution hierarchy will facilitate the recovery of booking velocity across these suppressed platforms.
